RUBYE JOHNSON MAY (MRS. HERBERT F.)

November 1890 — May 1974

The death of beloved Mrs. Rubye Johnson May, one of the founders of the Mid-West Tennessee Genealogical Society and its Director of Research, has shocked and saddened hundreds of people.

She was the daughter of the late Rev. P. F. Johnson, first Dean of the Cumberland Presbyterian Seminary of Bethel College, McKenzie, Tennessee, and through her entire life she gave of her time and talents to her Church and was one of the finest Christian characters ever known. She had attended presbytery sixty-three consecutive times and had held many offices in her denomination, the Cumberland Presbyterian. She attended Bethel College, Memphis State Teachers College and was a graduate of the University of Missouri. She had taught history and English in Kansas and West Tennessee and other localities.

Possibly no one in this section knew, or was more interested in the preservation of history and in genealogy than she. She had taught a class in genealogy at Jackson State College and also private classes. Her priceless library, her papers and notes have been donated to the Tennessee Archives Department and the Tennessee Room of the Jackson-Madison County Library. She was never too busy or too tired to help anyone who asked her. She was also a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. "Great was her faithfulness", was an expression used concerning her. Her life touched thousands of people and made better individuals of them, and much history has been preserved and hundreds of family lines established because of her knowledge and helpfulness. She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Grace Beasley of McKenzie, Tennessee and a niece, Mrs. Marguerite Richards of Oklahoma.

As an expression of our sincere appreciation for many fine contributions and loyal dedication to our Society, we respectfully dedicate this issue of FAMILY FINDINGS to Rubye Johnson May

EVIDENCE

UGA-Genealogical Research Seminar, 1972 - Jean Stephenson

All evidence has not the same value. It is roughly divided into five classes, known as (a) Primary evidence; (b) Collateral evidence; (c) Secondary evidence; (d) Circumstantial evidence, and (e) Reported evidence.

Primary evidence is of the highest value, then comes the other types, descending in the order listed, with reported evidence of least value.

EVIDENCE: DEFINITION OF EACH TYPE

- A. Primary evidence is that from a record when the record itself is the cause or result of the action or fact to be proved. Examples are: vital statistics, church records, wills, administrations, tombstones, etc. Primary evidence should be used to the fullest extent possible. As a rule other evidence should not be used until it has been determined that primary evidence does not exist, or cannot be secured.
- B. Collateral evidence. This is when the evidence is collateral to the purpose of the record but nevertheless is an integral part of it. Examples are deeds where a man speaks of his daughter by her married name, or a deed by a husband and wife of property inherited by the wife from her named father. If no official marriage record was made, or if it has been destroyed or cannot be located, the fact of the marriage may be proved from such collateral evidence.
- C. Secondary evidence consists of statements made by persons of facts they know of their own knowledge, such as depositions under oath, old letters relating contemporary events, etc. Old depositions are almost as good as primary evidence for many facts, as makers then were careful as to what they said under oath. But that does not mean that always the facts were true merely because someone said they were. When a deposition was made for use in a law suit, each side would file depositions asserting their understanding of the facts or construction of them on which they relied to prove their case. Both sides could not be right. When there is a contradiction additional evidence must be sought. All too often modern affidavits have no evidentiary value, for almost every one will swear to the accuracy of a copy without checking it, or to a fact whether they know it or merely believe it to be correct. The value of letters, recollections, etc. varies according to circumstances.
- D. Circumstantial evidence is so called because it is created when two or more facts are so related that if one which can be proved by a higher class of evidence is true, then the other must be true or so extremely probable as to warrant acceptance. An example is when a church record shows the marriage of a woman, stating she is the daughter of a clearly identified man, and within the next ten years records show the marriage of that man; then it may be concluded from circumstantial evidence that the man had been married before and had at least one daughter.
- E. Reported evidence is hard to define. It covers the class of material which is the basis for many county histories, biographies, etc. It is information collected by someone from others who have a knowledge of the facts. When such information is secured from those who participated in certain events or otherwise knew of them, and secured for other than genealogical purposes it has a definite value. However, it must be considered in the light of the purpose for which it was collected or recorded.

HEARSAY

- A. Hearsay, that which one has been told, or family tradition, is NOT evidence and cannot be accepted as such. While it may furnish clues for the genealogical researcher, and so be helpful to the person trying to work out and establish a pedigree, it is not to be accepted as correct, nor should it be used in a lineage paper for any of the organizations based on hereditary descent.

GRIMES FAMILY RECORDS

The following Bible Records were copied from an old Bible belonging to Mr. Earl B. Grimes, 794 Whitehall Street, Jackson, Tennessee, in July 1971. Since that time, Mr. Grimes has passed away, and we have no idea as to the whereabouts of this Bible. Anyone desiring more information about the Grimes Family can write the Society.

The Front Page of the Bible was torn out. The following is the frontispiece of the New Testament Section:

THE GENERALOGIST

By Ronald A. Bremer

Well, since this is March and about everyone has finished announcing their 1973 awards, I think it is about time to make the following contribution to the genealogical profession: The Annual Boo-Boo Awards.

1. The Golden Boo-Boo Award goes to that government agency which said that the 1900 federal census schedule would probably never be released.
2. The Silver Boo-Boo Award is awarded that government employee who said after the St. Louis fire, 'No one would be interested in those old records.'
3. The Bronze Boo-Boo Award is presented to that distinguished Eastern society which claims that all the records you will ever need to trace your British ancestry are found there at that society.
4. The Brass Boo-Boo Award is bestowed upon those two organizations which both published an index to the 1800 census for New York state.
5. The Copper Boo-Boo Award is freely given to all those states who refused to open up their records to researchers.
6. The Tin Boo-Boo Award is hereby presented to the lady who wrote: 'I do not think it is worthwhile for me to ask you to make an further researches as I am now in my eighty-first year I shall soon be able to make personal enquiries from any of my forerunners who happen to have gone in whatever direction I am going.'
7. The Plastic Boo-Boo Award is proudly given to the Social Security Administration who recently closed their records to researchers.
8. The Honorable Mention Boo-Boo Award goes to all those who transcribed the various local cemeteries onto alphabetical lists thus destroying possible family relationships and clues.
9. The Special Mention Boo-Boo Award is hereby presented to that historian who, after hearing a scientist state that there were many amateurs in his field which he called naturalist, replied, 'We have the same problem and we call our amateurs genealogist.'
10. The Unworthy to Mention Boo-Boo Award goes to that researcher who wrote to the American Antiquarian Society and states, 'My name is Adams; will you send me all you got on my name.'
11. The Hot Air Boo-Boo Award is given to all those who ordered their coat of arms from Ohio.
12. The Weirdo Boo-Boo Award goes to the county commissioner in a certain county in Ohio who auctioned off all of the probate packets from the courthouse.
13. The Boo-Boo's Boo-Boo Award goes to all the many name-gathers who still refuse to document their research.
